STADTPARK, VIENNA

Stadtspark was designed by painter Joseph Selleny and garden director Rudolf Siebeck in the 1860's. It is known as the Viennese City Park and acts as a link between the city centre and the Third District. The park offers prime examples of Viennese Art Nouveau with the Stadtbahn railway pavilions; however the most impressive structure in the park is the Kursalon Wien, an exquisite palace designed in the Italian Renaissance style and known for being a popular venue for composer Johann Strauss. In fact, amongst the formal gardens and green meadows of the park there is a famous monument dedicated to the composer.
